
Activity 2 - Sentence completion

Sentence completion exercises are those in which the beginning of sentences are given and you are required to complete the sentence in any way you like. This exercise helps you give expression to your thoughts, ideas, wishes and emotional conflicts.

Although such exercises are normally given as personality tests, they can also be used to develop writing skills as they give one the freedom to explore word and phrase associations. It will also help in autobiographical writing.

Exercise 2

Complete the following sentences.

1. I secretly wish _____
2. My greatest worry is _____
3. I get angry when _____
4. My best friend _____
5. Tomorrow I will _____
6. If I become _____
7. I wish I could _____
8. My family _____
9. In future _____
10. Often I have _____

Activity 3 - Autobiographical Writing

This kind of writing helps the student write about himself / herself (This kind of writing is often used as psychometric tests in many contexts.) In autobiographical writing, although there are no definite rules, the student can use descriptive writing and chronological sequencing to write about events in his or her own life. The student should also be able to intersperse description with commentary (on the effects of the events) on his or her life.

Exercise 3

Write about yourself, describing your family, your childhood and your schooling.
